GIVES REPORT ON WOOL POOL SALES

450,000 POUNDS SOLD THROUGH POOL THIS YEAR

CLEAR WOOL BRINGS 20C

Rejects Are Sold At About 14 Cents —Nodaway County Leads In Blankets Ordered

The following letter, which County agent R. A. Kinnaird is sending out today to members of the Farm Bureau, gives a summary of the affairs of the Northwest Missouri Wool Pool at St. Joseph, to which many Nodaway County wool growers consigned their clip this year:

"To those interested in the Northwest Missouri Wool Pool:

"I have just received a letter from John McDaniel, manager of the Northwest Missouri Wool Pool, in which he says, 'With the sale of our ¼ blood combing at 20 cents, and the supply of burry wool at 14¾ cents, the 1921 wool pool is practically cleaned up. We have on hand about 20,000 pounds of odd lots with an occasional lot that comes in yet. We are working on the accounts now; but as there are over 1000 of them it will be a few days before we will be able to send out the checks.

"'We have had some wool made into blankets, auto robes, yarn and batt, and have had a demand in excess of our supply from the mill. We expect to receive additional shipments soon and will be able to keep all orders filled. There has been a continual string of wool coming into the pool and no doubt this will continue. During the month of September about 30,000 pounds was received and in October 12,000 pounds. Quite a lot is coming in on custom work for blankets etc., which we exchange for wool.

"'Approximately, 450,000 pounds of Missouri wool has been sold through the pool this year. The clear wool has sold at an average of 20 cents and the rejects at about 14 cents. The expenses will run about 2 cents and a small storage shrink. We would be glad to hear from any of you who are interested and to have any suggestions you care to make.'

"Mr. McDaniel also sent a statement of the number of pounds of each grade of wool shipped from Nodaway County. This county has sent a total of 65,435 pounds of wool, all of which has been sold except 1134 pounds of heavy burry, and 191 pounds of Mohair. Of Nodaway County wool of all grades, both good and bad, we have sold 64,110 lbs at an aver of 17¾ cents. The inclosed statement of prices received for the different grades will make it possible for you to refer to your own individual grade sheet, that is the yellow sheet which you should have received from Mr. McDaniel several months ago—and find out just what your own wool brought in the pool.

"We have sent in more orders for blankets and batts than any other county, and are still taking lots of orders. Samples of the blankets, auto robes and yarn have been placed on display at the Farmer's Exchange at Ravenwood and at the Farmer's Exchange at Sheridan, from both of which places we shipped wool last spring. We thought it would be more convenient for some of you to see these goods at the exchanges than to come to Maryville to see the samples. I am sorry we did not have the wool batts also to put on display at the exchanges. We will have them in a few days."

EX-SERVICE MAN IS FIRST MEMBER

GRAHAM'S INTEREST HIGH

Mrs. M. M. Rhodes is Chairman of Committee Which Will Direct Drive There

Although the Fifth Roll Call of the Red Cross will not start until next Sunday, the first of the annual memberships was issued yesterday. It was taken out by Ova B. Clawson of Barnard, a former service man.

The war veteran was in the Red Cross Rooms yesterday and was attracted by the posters showing the peace time work of the Red Cross and especially its work among the ex-service men and their families. Remembering his own experiences, he asked to be allowed to contribute to the cause, even though the drive has not started.

Red Cross interest is still on the rise throughout the county. Plans are well under way at Graham, where Mrs. M. M. Rhdoes is the chairman. Mrs. Rhodes has had this office before and has a record of some very successful roll calls to her credit. With her on the committee are Mrs. Walter Freytag, as secretary, and Dr. M. M. Rhodes, treasurer. Several of the men and women of Graham have already expressed their interest, and offered to help in the house to house canvass in the town, and others will be secured for the canvass of the school districts.

Interest in the Red Cross is especially keen in Graham just now, for Mrs. Eva Hackney, the county nurse, has been at work this week in that part of the county. The Rev. L. P. Parker is to see the other ministers of Graham to arrange for a part of the union Father and Sons evening service, on November 13., to be given to the Red Cross. S. Harlan, editor of the Graham Tribune has been running Red Cross stories for some time, and is enthusiastic for the Red Cross work in the county.

E. D. Killingsworth and L. J. Clark, publishers of the Parnell Sentinel have written to the County Roll Call Committee "We are taking this means to thank you for your (Red Cross) story. Would like to have local stories (Red Cross) every few weeks. If there is anything we can do to help along the cause, feel at liberty to call on us."

The Red Cross film was hown for the first time at Parnell Wednesday evening. R. P. Hosmer, president of the Chamber of Commerce, spoke of the County Red Cross work. The film is shown in connection with the Chamber of Commerce Nodawy County film, and will be almost continuously used from now until the Roll Call.

The arguments started yesterday afternoon with the opening address by County Attorney George A. Anderson, and then followed by Homer Stephens of Clarinda, and Robert Frost of Plattsburg and James Mytton of St. Joseph for the defense.

LOCALS LEADING BY 20 POINTS

Bulletin.

The score at the beginning of the second quarter was Maryville 20 and Savannah 0.

The score at end of first quarter was Maryville, 6; Savannah, 0.

Willoughby and Carstens, for Maryville, each made 20 yard gains.

A "pep" assembly was held at the high school this morning for the high school-Savannah game being played this afternoon at the State Teachers College. The program consisted mainly of singing. After the songs a number of talks were given. Superintendent and Coach Ziegler said he had a number of players in the hospital but that Maryville was in a straight line for a victory today.

Gerald Hall, president of the annual staff, told about the plans for an annual this year. He wanted all the students of the Junior and Senior classes to have individual pictures taken soon. The annual will not be published before next spring. This number will be the third one.

Mr. Ezell explained the necessity of the student body yelling for their teams and having these pep meetings. Mr. Ezell said that the yells for a team when it is winning or losing is as important as the training of one of the players.

The officials for the game this afternoon were E. W. Glenn, umpire, and Coach Barnes of Trenton as referee.

"AMERICA'S STRIKING HOUR" TO BE REPEATED

Will Be Given Sunday Evening At The First Presbyterian Church By Westminster Guild

Sunday evening, November 6th, at 7:30 the Westminster Guild will give a second presentation of "America's Striking Hour" at the Presbyterian Church. This pageant was given for the first time last Sunday and since then many requests have been made that it be repeated. So many have said they want to attend Sunday, that a very urgent request is made by the Presbyterian Church that those who attended last Sunday do not come to see the pageant a second time, but that they attend some of the other church services. The church doors will be opened at 6:45 p. m.

At 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon a rehearsal of the entire pageant cast will be held at the church.

So many suggestions and invitations for the presentation of the pageant again have been made, that it has been difficult for the Westminster Guild to decide when to repeat it. After carefully canvasing the situation it was found impossible to get the cast together any night except Sunday either this week or next week, when something did not conflict. A Sunday afternoon presentation was considered but found impracticable on account of it being impossible to darken the church.

LAUNCHES AN APPEAL FOR 1916 NAVY PROGRAM

Rep. Britten Wants That Year Naval Building Program Of 12 Capital Ships Completed

Washington, Nov. 4—Representative Britten of Illinois, Republican, today launched an appeal for the completion of the 1916 naval building program which contemplated adding twelve capital ships to the navy. Some of these ships are now under construction.

"These self styled economic forces who advocate abandonment of the 1916 program" said Britten, "are supported by British propaganda which is intent upon guaranteeing British navy supremacy. All the world knows we have no desire for conquest and all the world knows we have no desire for conquest but for selfish control of commerce to the detriment of every other power on the earth."

Britten is a member of the naval affairs committee and recently returned from an extended trip through Europe.

Dr. and Mrs. G. C. Wallace and son, Victor, of Shawnee, Okla., who have been visiting Dr. Wallace's brothers, John, George and Frank Wallace, and their families, left this morning for their home.

Hyde Urges Quick Action in Passage of Soldiers Bonus

Governor Hyde in his message delivered personally late yesterday afternoon to a joint session of the house and senate said:

"I have called you together to consider two subjects.

"First: Legislation to provide for the payment of the bonus to soldiers and sailors in accordance with the constitutional amendment No. 9 submitted to and passed by the people in August, 1921; second: An amendment to senate bill No. 16 passed at the last special session, authorizing the issue and sale of $60,000,000 in state bonds to be issued not earlier than March first, 1923, as specified in the bill.

"This date is more than sixteen months off and there is no reason why development of the state's road program should not be begun earlier. The entire summer and fall of 1922 will be lost, so far as the highway system is concerned, unless the date of issuing the bonds is set forward. The people authorized issuance of the bonds and they desire the road program be commenced as early as possible, consistent with economical and efficient expenditure of the money. This work can begin early in 1922 if the legislature will authorize issuance at a sufficiently early date.

Would Provide Many Jobs

"For another reason the commencement of road work as early as possible is highly desirable. There exsists in the United States and in Missouri as well, a condition of unemployment which is giving our people grave concern. No method of alleviating unemployment, within the state's reach, could be more effective than opening the road program.

"The road bill passed at your special session provides construction shall begin as early as possible and practicable, simultaneously in each county. Therefore, beginning of such work will assist in furnishing employment in every corner of the state. The bill also provides that preference shall be given honorably discharged soldiers, sailors and marines. Early commencement of work will go far to relieve such unemployment as may exist among those to whom the state stands indebted for services rendered in war-time.

"Road work will afford work for idle teams of the farmer, and ameliorate to some extent the depressed conditions with which he is surrounded. Nothing could more improve business and industrial conditions generally than improvement in the farmers' situation and the road program will contribute in no small degree.

Federal Aid for Roads.

"The federal government has already passed a bill under which two and one-half million dollars will be available for Missouri. This money must be matched. There is also the possibility that in an effort to relieve the unemployment situation the federal government will take further steps in road construction and Missouri should be put in a position to match any money the government may offer.

"By an overwhelming preponderance of the vote cast, the people approved the resolution of the regular session authorizing issuance of $15,000,000 in bonds for payment and sailors of Missouri. The state has a very small public debt. It is able to pay the bonuses authorized. There should be no misunderstanding as to the purpose of the bill. The bonus is not a payment of obligation. It is a gift—an expression of gratitude; a token of appreciation which the people feel for services rendered by Missouri boys in time of war. It is the duty of the legislature and the executive offices to see that the bonus shall be paid as early as possible in order to alleviate the needs of any who may be in distress and in order as speedily as possible to put in concrete form the expression of gratitude and appreciation which the people have authorized.

"It is desirable that this special session be short. I have called it early in the hope that its labors will be completed by Nov. 11, Armistice day. It would be particularly fitting and add to the joyousness of that day for the soldier if, on that date, this legislature shoul complete the act which would effectuate the bonus. Personally, I should feel both pleasure and honor to be able to sign the bill on that day."

Forumettes

Men who complain that the world does not understand them aught to be glad it does not.

Contentment like money is scarce.

Picking the wrong woman for wife and the wrong horse at a race amount to the same thing observed a Maryville bachelor.

Many people apparently are always looking for a new kind of a mistake to make.

Louise, the stenographer, says while every woman would live long, no one would grow old.

Let love meander down the street and you will see common sense sneak down the alley.

No matter how absent minded some Maryville people may be they never forget their troubles.

Uncle Abner says too many men give themselves credit for their successes and blame God for their failures.

There is a silver lining to every cloud but about the only fellow who sees it is the one who makes umbrellas.

A St. Joseph grocer took his boy out of school and the authoritics got after him. When asked the reason for his action he said they were teaching the lad that sixteen ounces make a pound.

Louise, the stenographer, got a chance to wear that squirrel coat the other day when the temperature fell the one for which she mortgaged nearly a year's salary. And she looks cute in it too.

Calendars for 1921 have about the same value as a wad of chewed gum. Those that Maryville firms could not give away are being carted away by the junk man.

A West Twelfth street woman heard her little boy use a vile word the other day and asked him where he heard it. He said Santa Claus used it last Christmas. "How was that?" asked the puzzled mother "When he fell over a chair in my room," the lad replied.

A 150th Anniversary

English-speaking people and, indeed, many others are this year thinking of the 150 anniversary of the writing of Rock of Ages by Augustus Toplady, whose parish adjoined that of Burrington Coombe, where stands the cleft rock which inspired the hymn. In 1776 while out walking the writer was overtaken by a violent storm and took refuge in the giant cleft of the towering rock.

Last month a great celebration took place there to commemorate the writing of the poem, and no less than 10,- thousand persons journeyed from every direction to take part. The rock is on the outskirts of an English village, and stands at the top of a cliff towering towards the clouds, and cleft from bottom to top. The recent pilgrimage to the rock was under the auspices of the Church of England, with a Salvation Army Band taking part, and a blind singer who has a marvelously sweet soprano voice came from Wales to lead the singing of the hymn, the immense throng joining her.

At this meeting it was decided that a memorial to Toplady should be placed on the rock, to which pilgrimages by tourists are made every year. Rock of Ages is found in the hymnals of all denominations.

Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee;
Let the water and the blood,
From Thy riven side which flowed,
Be of sin the double cure,
Cleanse me from its guilt and power.

Not the labor of my hands
Can fulfill thy law's demands;
Could my zeal no respite know,
Could my tears forever flow,
All for sin could not atone;
Thou must save, and Thou alone.

Nothing in my hand I bring,
Simply to Thy cross I cling;
Naked, come to Thee for dress,
Helpless, look to Thee for grace,
Foul, I to the fountain fly;
Wash me Savior, or I die.

While I draw this fleeting breath,
When my eyelids close in death,
When I soar to worlds unknown,
See Thee on Thy judgment throne
Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee.

MEN OF GOTHAM LEARN SECRETS OF VANITY BOX

New York, Nov. 3—Beauty parlors for men!

Milady no longer has a monopoly upon the secrets of the cosmetic, the eyebrow pencil and the vanity box.

By a simple process of evolution the barber shop has become the rival of the best-equipped feminine beauty parlirs. A few years ago the barber shop was the Saturday night rendezvous of congenial souls seeking a "haircut and shave," the gossip of the barber with the double chin, both of which were perpetually engaged in conversation; a glimpse at the Police Gazette, and the exchange of gossip with other congenial souls.

Not so to-day. The "barber," as we once knew him, has joined the dod, the dinosaur and other extinct species, so far as New York is concerned. Here to-day he is an artist, or, as he prefers to call himself, a "tonsorial specialist," at whose hand is every conceivable device electricity, sanitation and facial overhauling. He disdains to lend his talent to the "hair-cut and shave" customer, but will exert himself to effect a magical change in those needing it and willing to pay the price.

Double chins are ironed out, wrinkles eradicated, a blush is made to grow where but whiskers flourished before, hollow cheeks are made full and firm, eyes rimmed with tell-tale blue rings of dissipation are revamped, and the customer laughs at Ponce de Leon and his fabled fountain of youth. Even sunken chests are given electric treatment guaranteed to make the taker rival exponents of the Full Shirt Front.

Leavening Strength Tells the Story
The price you pay for baking powder doesn't determine the results you will have on bake day—it's the leavening strength that counts.
You may buy a baking powder for less than Calumet and think you are practicing economy. Don't be misled—the bakings you spoil will make those that are successful exorbitant in cost.
CALUMET
has successfully proven, during the past thirty years, that it contains more than the ordinary leavening strength. That's why bakings where it is employed never fail to raise properly.
Calumet is used by more housewives, leading chefs, domestic scientists, restaurants, hotels and railroads than any other brand. Millions buy it—you should try it.
A pound can of Calumet contains full 16 oz. Some baking powders come in 12 oz. cans instead of 13 oz. cans. Be sure you get a pound when you want it.

The Scrap Book

SHE RETRIEVED HER PENNY

Elderly Lady Lost Her Way, but Had No Intention of Losing Anything Else.

Tompkins was passing the offertory bag in church when an old lady hurried in. She walked quickly down the aisle, stopped by Tompkins, dropped a penny in the bag, and moved to a seat.

The bag bearer was at the last pew when the old lady came hustling back again. She snatched a penny from the bag, and was passing out of the church door when Tompkins grabbed her arm.

"I say," he muttered, "why in the name of goodness do you come in here, drop a coin in the bag, and then take it out again and leave?"

The old lady shook him off indignantly. "I'm in the wrong church," she said.

RICH HARVEST FROM THE SEA

One Acre of Salt Water Capable of Producing an Almost Incredible Amount of Food.

North sea fishermen handle ten thousand million fishes of all sorts and sizes, from the giant ray to the tiny whiting, every year. The twin ports of Yarmouth and Lowestoft have alone received nine hundred million herrings in one season.

One acre of the North sea, or the English channel is capable of yielding as great a weight of food as a hundred acres of the best grass land in Sussex.

There has been quite a run on fowl farms lately, but when we consider that the cod produces eight million eggs, the domestic fowl has to take a back seat. It is estimated, however that only one egg in ten millions lives to "grow up."

Salmon produce a thousand eggs for every pound of their weight, and though the canning factories of western Canada and the United States are working hard all the time to supply the world's demands, the fish still run up the rivers in hundreds of thousands.

Watch Long Under Ground.

An interesting find has been made in King's Park, Edinburgh. While workmen were engaged recently in cutting the channel for the electric cable from Portobello power station, near St. Margaret's well, in the King's park, one of their number unearthed a large gold watch which has turned out of exceptional interest. The watch was handed over to the police, and investigation by experts has proved that it was made in the year 1777 or 1778. The face has been slightly damaged, but considering the great length of time which has elapsed, the timepiece is in a remarkable state of preservation. Some of the metal wheels are rusty, but all the gold parts are quite bright. A scrutiny of the police records for the past 50 years failed to find any information relating to a lost or stolen watch answering to the description. The number on the watch is 3147, and the maker's name is described by the initials C. M.

A CONCRETE EXAMPLE

"As one grows older there are certain things in which it is difficult to keep up one's interest. Don't you find it so?"

"Er-yes; there's the mortgage on my house, for example."

Finger Prints by Phone.

The machine for transmitting photographic records over a telephone wire is to be mobilized in the interests of justice.

The chief of the Italian school of scientific criminology proposes to use this instrument for the transmission of finger prints of suspected criminals.

By this means, when a man is arrested in London, for instance, it will be possible simultaneously to dispatch his finger prints to Paris, Berlin and Rome, and ask the police of those cities for any details they have regarding previous convictions.

Forfeited.

"Hiram," warned Mrs. Cornfossel. "We can't put up the rent on our guests this summer without bein' denounced as profiteers."

"That's all right. We can get all that's comin' to us by puttin' up the price of the board."

Sermon Possibly Too Powerful.

One Sunday evening a minister in Ontario was preaching from the text "And the walls of Jericho fell down." During the night a crash was heard and the next morning it was found that one side of the cellar wall had fallen down.

Picture Is Without a Doubt the Most Pretentious Undertaking in Movies—at Empire.

Metro's long awaited "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," made from the famous novel of Vicente Blasco Ibanez, is coming to the Empire Theater Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. This is without a doubt the most pretentious undertaking in motion pictures and among modern works, at least, the story from which it is made is probably the best known and most widely read. The novel has passed its 200th edition and is still in great demand.

"The Four Horsemen," has been six months in the making and is actually a million dollar spectacle. Briefly summarized, these are the chief points of interest concerning the great film:

Scene from "THE FOUR HORSEMEN OF THE APOCALYPSE"

Upwards of 12,000 persons were engaged in the undertaking. More than 124,000 tons of masonry, steel, lumber, furniture and shrubbery—in excess of the material used in erecting the famous Woolworth Building, New York City—were used in constructing the massive settings.

An entire French village, capable of housing 60,000 souls, was put up and then destroyed before the camera lens. Every house in this village was finished throughout, instead of being a "front" which is generally used by the average motion picture director.

An armory and two machine shops were incidentals of the other building operations.

More than 500,000 feet of raw film was exposed in the taking of the picture, which when shown on the screen of the Empire Theater will not exceed 12,000 feet.

Fourteen camera men were employed to "shoot" the big scenes from every angle, and Rex Ingram, the director, at times had fourteen other directors assisting him.

It required weeks to weed out and assemble the completed scenes from the eighty-five miles of film exposed; the mere running of 500,000 feet of film through a projection machine at the rate of sixty feet a minute, consumed eighteen days of eight working hours each.

Field kitchens and a complete commissary department were required to feed the army of 13,000 people engaged on the production.

A complete telephone system was installed for the use of Mr. Ingram while handling some of the great scenes, and he was in constant touch with his assistants scattered on posts over several miles of terrain.

A collection of art treasures from the galleries and private sources valued beyond price were used in dressing the handsome interiors. The insurance on these works of art alone was $375,000.

The cast interpreting the roles in the most widely read book of all times—except the Bible—contains two dozen principal players who in other productions would be rated as stars.

The leading roles are enacted by Rudolph Valentino as Julio Desnoyers, Alice Terry as Marguerite Laurier, Pomeroy Cannon as Madariaga, "The Centaur," Nigel de Bruiler as Tchernoff, the Russian visionary and Mabel Van Buren as Elene, while the other prominent parts are taken care of by Joseph Swickart, who will be favorably remembered for his good work as Ambassador Girard in "My Four Years in Germany," Brinsley Shaw, Wallace Beery, who is considered the best villain" on the screen, Alan Hale, Brigatta Clark, "Smoke" Turner, Edward Connelly, Jacques d'Auray, Mlle. Dolorez and Harry S. Northup. A special musical score composed by Ernest Luz will accompany "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" during its engagement at the Empire theater.

An Indian Volstead Law

The Indians of the Swerper Caste in Delhi, India, have decided that any member found violating the local prohibition law is to be beaten fifty times with his shoes, his mustache shaved off on one side, and a fine of five cowaes. Every member of the Caste is a prohibition enforcement officer and there is a reward of from one to five rupees for giving information against a person using intoxicants. So the world moves.

Listen to Reason

With the wisdom of a sage, Poor Richard said: "If you will not hear Reason, she will surely rap your knuckles."

The advertising you find in this paper is 100 per cent reason. Ignore its messages, and you neglect opportunity, overlook vital information and put yourself in a way to get your knuckles severly rapped. Heed them, and you cannot fail to profit.

Sometimes, the advertisements keep you from making an unwise purchase by pointing out the reasons why one article suits you better than another.

And ALWAYS they identify for you goods of unquestioned value. When a store or manufacturing concern puts its name on goods and tells you about them, you may be sure that they are worth consideration. It does not pay to advertise merchandise that is not good.

Temperance In Syria

Temperance instruction in the schools has reached Syria. A prize of $5.00 for the best essay on temperance called out about 100 essays from Christians, Moslems and one Druze boy. This boy was 16 years old and won the prize. The essay would have done credit to one of our American lads. The last clause shows how all are looking to America to give the world example by law enforcement on the benefits of real prohibition. It is as follows: "Let us wake up and imitate America in organizing societies to prevent the use of liquors in this country. In this way we will give Syria sound minds, good morals and sound bodies which will be able to struggle to make our beloved Syria a respected nation."

LOWER MISSISSIPPI VALLEY SEES PROSPERITY AHEAD

Boost in Cotton Prices and Big Feed Crops Help District Regain Its Financial Feet.

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 2.—At least one agricultural section of the United States is ready to report that it has enjoyed a vast improvement in business conditions and in the feelings of the people.

The Lower Mississippi Valley is in the midst of a "come back" which will see it enjoying normal times a year hence, according to a report just compiled by the Southern Alluvial Land Association, of Memphis, a sort of Chamber of Commerce to this territory.

Bankers throughout the region report business picking up rapidly, feelings improved, bank deposits growing, accounts, some of more than a year's standing, being paid, and an air of optimism that has not been so pronounced since the fall of 1919.

Two factors enter into the quick response that the Lower Valley is showing: Cotton prices are better than were expected when this year's crop was planted, and feed crops have been liberally produced.

With the prospect of low prices for cotton the crop was put in at a very low cost in the spring. Acreage was held to a minimum, both voluntarily and involuntarily, and careful attention was given it throughout the growing season. After a bad start, due to rains, and serious damage by the boll weevil ,ideal conditions existed, so that what cotton was matured turned out to be excellent, and it was picked before damaged. The better prices now being obtained resulted in much more cash being received in this section than was expected.

At the same time the prospects of a lean year caused farmers and planters to produce as much food and feedstuffs as they could handle. The result is that the greatest corn, potato and hay crops ever known to this part of the country are now in hand. The old practice of using cotton money to buy such necessities will not be forced upon the agricultural section this winter. Livestock promises to be in better condition in the spring—and for practically no cash outlay—than in years.

With these conditions now existing bankers say that cotton will be put in the ground at a lower cost next year than for many years. Anything like reasonable prices will mean good money. In addition, the experience of the past year in producing necessities at home rather than buying them in the open market, linked with the experience of practicing economy and "sane methods," will pave the way for a prosperous farm season next year, with the prediction of return of normalcy and surplus of money.

CHURCH TO FIX DATE FOR EASTER

Vatican Calls Conference of Astronomers to Meet in Rome in April.

Rome, Nov. 2.—The Vatican has announced that a conference of astronomers will take place in Rome next April under the presidency of Cardinal Mercier with the object of reforming the calendar and fixing Easter.

The occurence this year of Easter Sunday, on March 27, within five day of its earliest posible date, revived the proposal for a fixed Easter. No fewer than sixteen Easters will happen in March between now and the close of this century—an average of one every five years—unless something is done to prevent the erratic wandering of the festival between March 22 and April 25.

Under the existing ecclesiastical rule Easter Sunday can fall on any of 35 dates. The present rule is that Easter must be a Sunday and that the ecclesiastical full moon (which is not the same as the real moon) upon which it depends must occur on one of the seven days immediately preceding it. Thus, to have Easter Sunday on its earliest date, March 22, the ecclesiastical moon must be full on March 21, which date must also be a Saturday; but so rarely are these conditions satisfied in the same year that it is over a century since Easter fell on March 22, and it will not again fall so early until the year 2285.

Of late years the inconvenience of a movable Easter has induced calendar reformers to propose reforms which will either make Easter a fixed festival or greatly restrict its wanderings. One suggestion is that Easter Sunday should be assigned to the third Sunday after the spring equinox, which would give it a range of eight days, between April 5 and April 13, according to the date and day of the week on which the equinox falls.

Other proposals aim at an Easter absolutely fixed to one date. That, of course, would necessitate a radical reform of the whole calendar, under which the same weekday should always fall on the same date.

Any such reform will probably have to be universal throughout Christendom, for the moon-controlled Easter is common to all civilized countries: though, owing to the fact that the Greek church still uses the Julian calendar, there are always nearly two Easter days every year, one the Georgian, observed by Roman Catholics and Protestants and the other the Julian, kept by those countries which are in communion with the Greek church.

Ten Dollars or a Night in Jail

By R. RAY BAKER.

©, 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Betty Clark's red lips parted and a merry laugh pealed from her throat.

"Excuse me for laughing, Jerry, but it's really funny. Jerry Holmes making a proposal of marriage! Can you imagine it? But it's true. I heard it with my own ears. Oh, dear!"

"What's so funny about it?" he growled. "Haven't I known you long enough, Betty? Haven't we lived next door to each other all our lives? Who's got a better right to propose to you than I?"

"Why, it's so foolish, Jerry. Think of you, Jerry, looking out for a wife; you who never did a day's work in your life, who have no responsibilities. Jerry, you're not the kind a girl wants to marry—at least, not my kind of girl. You're too easy, for one thing. Most girls like to be bossed, though they won't admit it. Can you picture yourself making me do something? No, of course you can't. At least I can't, and if I could I might picture myself marrying you. I'm fond of you, I admit, but I can't take your proposal seriously, because I can't take you seriously. You don't yourself, so how can I? No, Jerry, forget it; it can never be."

Jerry picked up his tennis racket and walked slowly away, scowling fiercely at Betty's big roadster resting near the porch of her home. He was always beaten—at everything he undertook. When he tried to take Betty to Mrs. Longworthy's ball he was beaten by Henry Twite, who had a more commanding way. This afternoon he was beaten by Betty herself on the tennis court, and now he was beaten for sure in the game of love. He went to his room, banged his racket into a closet and flung himself disconsolately on the bed.

He was discouraged, and at the same time he was desperate. He thought of hiring a gang of thugs to kidnap Betty, just so he could rescue her and be a hero. His brain framed up other wild schemes, all of which he abandoned. He terminated his frenzied conjecturing by arriving at the determination to get a job and go to work and prove himself worthy. He had in mind no particular job; the first one that happened along would satisfy.

Down into the city went Jerry. Leaving his car in a garage, he started out job hunting, wandering rather aimlessly. He happened by a police station at a time when a file of bluecoats was coming out, and it made him stop and think.

"That's a good chance," he told himself. "Why not be a policeman? Perhaps it would make me more commanding. It's worth a trial, anyway."

Into the police station he went, found the captain in charge and asked for a job.

The captain smiled rather perplexedly at the good-looking, well-dressed, rather large youth.

"A job, eh? Well, we need men. Can you manage a motorcycle?"

Jerry nodded vigorously. A motorcycle was one of the few things he ever had been able to manage.

"Well, we'll give you a trial."

Jerry went through the formalities necessary to become a guardian of the law, was equipped with a four-cylinder racing motorcycle, and in due course of time was sent out to Crandall park to patrol the boulevards in quest of speeders. He felt misgivings aplenty, but his nice blue suit imparted a certain degree of confidence.

He stood for some time in the shade of a big tree and meditated. While he stood there at least three big machines whizzed by, going at least forty miles an hour. And he was supposed to catch these demons. Well, he couldn't perform his duty by standing there, so he started the engine of his motorcycle, mounted, let in the clutch and started down the boulevard.

The job was not exactly to his liking. In order to make arrests he would have to appear stern, even pugnacious. And that went against Jerry's grain.

As he neared a curve in the drive he heard a car coming, with the cut-out open. He knew it was a speeder by the sound. He supposed he would have to make an arrest, and yet he dreaded it.

Around the corner came the auto and plunged straight at him. He swerved his cycle and the speeding machine missed him by an inch. Then Jerry became angry, probably for the first time in his life. If he hadn't been quick he would have been a dead policeman now.

He turned about and gave chase. The motorcar was far along the boulevard now, but Jerry opened the throttle and began to gain. Presently he could see that he was holding his own, and his speedometer registered forty-five miles an hour. He increased the speed to fifty, then fifty-five, and finally sixty. It was a fast automobile, but the motorcycle was faster, and in a short time Jerry came up alongside the speeder.

A girl was driving, laughing, but she caught a glimpse of blue out of the side of her eye and the expression changed.

"Stop!" roared the peaceful Jerry. "Stop, in the name of the law!" The girl stopped, a troubled look in her eyes, and drew up to the side of the road. Jerry did likewise, and as he stepped from his machine he discovered that the girl was Betty.

"You're under arrest," he said gruffly. "I'll have to take you to the station."

Betty was staring at him rather wildly.

"Why—why—it can't be Jerry!" she exclaimed.

"No matter who it is," he growled. "You're arrested for speeding and you're coming with me to the station."

"Yes, it is Jerry," the girl announced, amazed, but with evident relief. "I guess you must be joking. Where did you get those duds?"

"Never mind," he said pompously. "I'm an officer of the law and you're my prisoner."

"I guess not," she laughed. "This is too ridiculous for words. But I must be hurrying along, Jerry. I have a date with father, and I'm late." She made as though to start the car.

Jerry held up his hand.

"I'm not fooling, Betty. You're arrested, and that's all there is to it. It's no joke. You've broken the traffic law, and it won't go with me. Come along to the station."

Her case was quickly disposed of.

"Ten dollars or a night in jail," said the judge.

Betty began to weep and Jerry felt his courage waning. But he thrust his sympathy rudely aside.

"I—I haven't any money with me," Betty pleaded. "Will you pay my fine, Jerry?"

"Not much," he said sternly. "It's the lockup for you."

He winked at the judge. The judge had some humor in his makeup and he seemed to sense the real situation.

"Officer, lock her up," he ordered.

"This will be yours," he said.

"But, Jerry," she wailed, "surely you wouldn't do this terrible thing."

"Well," he replied, with a firmness he did not feel, "I have to do my duty. I may have been easy once, but I'm not so easy now. But I'll pay your fine, Betty, on one condition. It is that you marry me."

"And if I refuse—?"

"Then it's all night in a cell," was Jerry's ultimatum.

Betty sobbed.

"Jerry, you've done it. You've made me do something in spite of myself. You forced me to accompany you to the police station, and now—and now—you're forcing me to marry you. And it's not so bad after all, because I've been loving you right along and was only trying to wake you up by what I said."

DIVORCE EASY IN OLD JAPAN

What Is Prescribed, Concerning the Matter, in the Oldest Code of Nippon Laws.

Divorce in old Japan was called Mikudari han (three lines and a half), from the fact that when the husband wanted to get rid of his wife all he had to do was to give her a letter consisting of three and a half lines.

There is an old usage that one who proposes to marry has to draw up a written contract consisting of seven lines and submit it to the fiancee's mother. And love letters used to be written in three and a half lines. The Koshibagaki, one of the best pornographic books, attests the usage of giving certificates of divorce to the disowned wife in the Seventeenth century.

Although it is unknown when adopted, the oldest code of Japanese laws states that the husband at the divorce of his wife should give a written certificate signed by his relatives, and where the wife was illiterate, the certificate was to be drawn up in signs. During the Togukawa regime the divorce certificate was the necessary condition of divorce.

The only recourse for ill-treated wives in the Togukawa period was the special institution of the divorce temple. Women who hated their husbands and resorted to the temples of nuns might be allowed to return to their parents' home after three years' discipline in the temple.

That Settled It.

Daddy was in the habit of going into the apartment upstairs to play poker every evening. His neighbor, who was something of an invalid, was unable to visit daddy's apartment without great inconvenience. Mother often missed daddy, but Tommy had Fido, so he didn't mind it a bit. One evening mother happened to send Tommy upstairs to borrow something, and he found daddy upstairs comfortably seated at the table playing poker, and sitting serenely on the arm of his chair was Fido. Down came Tommy, tears streaming down his little face as he blubbered: "Oh, mother, daddy's got Fido upstairs teaching him to play poker, and now my doggie will never want to stay home any more!"

A Widow at Nine.

In the Seventeenth century, juvenile unions were of frequent occurrence. Wards in chancery were sometimes married at five years of age; and Moll Villiars, daughter of the first duke of Buckingham, was not merely a wife but a widow before she was nine, and we read of her romping in the garden in her widow's veil. In almost every instance, however, such marriages were in name only, and the little wives were allowed to reach their teens before taking up the burdens of wedded life.—London Tit-Bits.

SAYS DISARMAMENT WELCOME TO JAPAN

NIPPON STATESMAN DECLARES HIS COUNTRY MISREPRESENTED

GERMAN LOSS A LESSON

Imperialistic Aims Have Been Greatly Modified—Nation Poor in Natural Resources.

London, Nov. 3.—Disarmament is more urgently welcomed in Japan than in any other country, according to Viscount Kano, who represents that nation on the League of Nations Council.

In an interview granted International News Service, Viscount Kano tells of the feelings, hopes and apprehensions of his people as follows:

"Japan is often blamed as being a militaristic and Jingoist country. But everybody who is familiar with her history knows that she has been under the menace of foreign invasion for centuries. The invasion by the Mongols was the first. Then, in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, Japan was obliged to close her country for fear of conquest by European maritime nations. The power of Britain extended through India and Singapore to Hong Kong. The French came as near as Cochin China. The Dutch and the Portuguese took the South Sea Islands. Russia ws stretching her arms through Siberia to Manchuria. When Japan saw that neighboring countries were passing one by one to foreign domination it was inevitable that she should feel apprehensive, and the patriotic feelings of the people were thouroughly aroused.

"The realization of her peril profoundly stirred her imagination, and she resolved upon taking drastic steps for her self-preservation. Hence her reconstruction from the feudalism to nationalism. Such a step was deemed by all the far-seeing population in her midst to be her only salvation.

"The reconstruction of our army and navy inevitably followed. But it was only during the fifteen years that followed the Russian war that the militaristic party grasped political power and propagated among the people the necessity of territorial expansion in Manchuria and Siberia.

Fortunately for Japan the failure of the Prussian militarism in the great war was a striking lesson, and at the same time my people found the burden of expense for the army and navy to be intolerable.

"Disarmament is more urgently welcomed in Japan than in any other country. She is poor in natural resources. Her transport is not yet efficient, and houses are scarce. These facts have had a great effect on her national feelings; her imperialistic aims have in consequence been greatly modified.

"Let me give you three pictures of Japan at the present time:

"First: Several months in advance of the proposal by the United States government to hold the conference in Washington Mr. Ozaki, ex-Minister of Justice, made a disarmament tour throughout Japan and took a postcard vote. Ninety per cent of the population declared itself in favor of disarmament.

"In Japan we have conscription, and at the age of twenty every boy must present himself for medical inspection, with a view to undergoing military or naval training. Every one of their mothers worships at the shrine, praying that her son may be passed medically unfit to join the army.

"Third picture: When the anti-American feeling was very strong the students of all the universities and colleges in Tokio decided at a conference that they would not fight against America or any nation, because war helped the capitalist and the manufacturer alone, and all the rest of the community suffered.

"It might well be asked why Japan is spending 50 per cent of her revenue on the army and navy. It is because Japan is not as yet thoroughly democratic and never will be until the political franchise is extended to women.

"Economic needs caused America to call a disarmament conference at Washington to solve the Pacific problem, one which should be discussed by the nations of the whole world, with the working classes represented."

THIRTEEN ADDITIONS AT SERVICES LAST NIGHT

Revival Meeting At First Christian Church May Close Next Sunday Night

A large delegation from the Burlington Junction Church attended the revival at the First Christian Church last night. The delegation was headed by the pastor, the Rev. F. B. Nickerson, and the Sunday school superintendent, Homer Carmichael.

There were thirteen more additions to the Church in the service last night, which made it one of the greatest services of the entire series. This brings the total number of additions in the local campaign to one hundred and sixty-seven.

The local committee has arranged with Evangelists Kellems and Humbert to remain in the meeting over Sunday at least. There is a probability that the meeting will close Sunday night. Definite announcements of this, however, will be made at the Sunday services.

Professor Humbert sang in the services last night the special feature of which was his playing his own accompaniment as the regular organist was not present.

Great plans are being made for the services Sunday. Last Sunday was to be "Every Church Member Sunday," but owing to the rain and mud many of these could not attend. So it is to be tried again next Sunday. A special appeal is being made by the services, both Sunday School and church service, Sunday morning. If this plan can be realized it will insure an attendance of more than one thousand in the school. The men are determined that the women shall not outnumber them next Sunday and quite a little contest is on between them this week.

Dr. Kellems will give the closing sermon of the series of Baptism tonight, his subject being "What Takes Place in The Act Of Baptism."

There will be services Saturday night and all personal workers are busy seeing their friends and all available prospects before the meeting comes to a final close.

The County Campaign pictures were shown at Barnard last night to a large audience. There were three additions in the services there bringing the total up to forty-two. The meeting there will probably close tonight.

To State Teachers College

Otto McDaniel, a former McFall boy, who has been living here for some time past, went to Bethany yesterday and was examined by the federal vocational board. He was adjudged disabled from war service and selected a vocational training course. He will go the first of the week to Maryville to take up architecture and indoorwork at the state college.—Albany Ledger.
